The Average Cost of a Family Health Insurance Plan is Now $27,000

Higher spending on chronic diseases, weight-loss drugs and hospital bills help drive the increase

By Anna Wilde Mathews and Ruth Simon, The Wall Street Journal

he cost of health insurance rose steeply for a third year in a row in 2025, reaching just under $27,000 for a family plan, according to an annual survey from the nonprofit KFF, which provides the broadest picture of U.S. employer health coverage.

That is a 6% increase from the year before, and builds on two prior years of 7% gains. The cost is rising faster than inflation, and economists and business leaders said it could bite into employment and wage growth.

"If healthcare costs go up faster than the economy in general, that means there's less money left over to go to wages," said Gary Claxton, a senior vice president at KFF....

The KFF survey, which includes more than 1,860 employers and was completed earlier this year, offers a detailed snapshot of workplace insurance. Nearly half the U.S. population gets health coverage through a job.

The rising cost of employer coverage is driven mostly by higher healthcare spending. Insurers and employers point to rising rates of conditions including cancer in the working-age population. Hospital prices have also grown in recent years, as healthcare providers have negotiated higher rates in their contracts.

Employers are seeing increased outlays on new and costly therapies, particularly the popular drugs known as GLP-1s, a > category that includes the weight-loss treatments Wegovy and Zepbound.

> Kyle Rodgers, chief executive of Dannah Investment Group, a wealth-management firm in Dallas, said rising healthcare spending, including on weight-loss medications, has made it tougher to shop for coverage. "There's a real tightening among carriers across the board when it comes to taking on new business," he said.

Figuring out the right healthcare strategy "is a huge drain," said Rodgers, who has around 10 employees. "The time we have to spend trying to navigate this health-insurance fiasco is time we don't spend with our clients." Health insurance is Dannah's largest expense after wages, he said.

To defray the rising tab for health insurance, many employers push more of the burden onto workers. San Francisco-based William Duff Architects has covered full health-insurance premium costs for each employee for most of its nearly 27-year history, though workers paid extra for family coverage. That changed this year, after the roughly 25-person company was hit with a 38% rate increase for its most generous plan, which offers a large array of doctors and hospitals.

"Over the years, we've been managing the cost increases through cuts in other areas, efficiencies and less profits," said William Duff Jr., founder and managing principal. "We couldn't absorb it all any longer." Now, employees will have to pay extra if they choose the generous plan with a big provider network, rather than a more basic option.

Other companies shift costs onto workers by boosting out-of-pocket charges such as deductibles and copayments. Though the growth in deductibles flattened a few years ago, they have begun ticking upward again, the KFF survey shows....

Flex Filing Deadline Approaching Fast

he deadline to file for reimbursement from your 2025 PEEHIP Flexible Spending Accounts (FSA) plan is January 15, 2026. If you were enrolled in the Health FSA or Dependent Care Reimbursement Account (DCRA) between October 1, 2024, and September 30, 2025, there is still time to file for reimbursement of expenses incurred by September 30, 2025. Submit your request online at healthequity.com/peehip or mail in a reimbursement form along with supporting documentation to HealthEquity. Remember, unused funds contributed to an FSA plan cannot be refunded. All unused funds remaining in your 2025 DCRA and in excess of $640 in your Health FSA after the January 15 filing deadline will be forfeited. To check your balance, log in to your HealthEquity online account or contact customer service at 877.288.0719.
